I would not be surprised to learn that you had met Bob Wray, Sr. somewhere along the way. When he passed away last week, it provoked some memories for us. We had known him for more than 40 years as a frequent candidate for public office, as a Des Moines City councilman, member of several service clubs and other organizations.

Bob would pop into our old office on 152nd in Burien, always with a big smile and that infectious energy that characterized him. He was running for a state representative seat in 1975 when we first met him. He didn't win, but he didn't quit. He had an ineffable quality that makes you remember him. He was a jeweler but never led with that aspect of his life. It was always about something going on. He seemed to have a need to be involved, to do his part to contribute to the betterment of the community. (Also see page 11.)

Safe injection sites

The question of whether to allow Safe Injection Sites in our community is a knotty problem. If we turn our backs on it, it won't go away. People who are addicted to heroin will continue to use it, just as those addicted to cigarettes or booze will. We have treatment programs for smoking and drinking. Shouldn't we have them for people who have gotten hooked on other drugs? Some people look at those who are addicted as criminals. The possession, use or sale of heroin has been illegal since 1924. In 1973, a synthetic drug called Methadone was introduced to allow addicts to gradually get off the use of heroin. Some became addicted to Methadone (not to be confused with Methamphetamine).

But does looking the other way address the problem? Most of the small towns in King County already banned safe injection sites. All this really does is have the effect of squeezing a balloon. The problem will show up somewhere else.

Shouldn't we really bore in on this issue and see what we can do to help both those addicted and at the same time curb its use? Is it better to allow those addicted to shoot up furtively? If someone you know has this problem, how would you want to deal with it?

The weather around here

Lindsay Peyton, who hails from Houston, told us Saturday that she was getting lots of texts with photos from old friends still living in the path of Hurricane Harvey. She also said her relatives still there are safe. And that she has convinced her mom and dad to move to this area. Houstonites have what they called "Hurricane Season," expecting nasty weather annually. If you followed the reports on the current storm, it might give you a sense of how terrifying it is for those living in that region on the Gulf of Mexico.

The storm and the rain it has brought with it reached far inland, doing billions—with a 'B'—of dollars in damage. Here in Western Washington, we have some very windy days and the occasional storm. But nothing like people in south Texas and other parts of the country endure.

SCOTT ANTHONY

GT called me a couple of days ago, 'I'm going to run up to that new sportsman's store in Olympia, you want to come with me?'

GT went on to tell me a bit about the store, Cabela's, and that it was huge, with neat things like stuffed animals inside. I usually prefer my animals unstuffed but I asked him if they have clothing items and he confirmed it to be so, and since I had been looking for a new pair of suspenders I said, 'I'm in.'

GT pulled up in my driveway, spot on 10 a.m. Sunday, just like he had said and while we idled out of the neighborhood, we chatted about the importance of punctuality. "Shows respect for the people you're meeting," I said. GT reminded me of a drywall man that we had both hired for remodel work in days past named Dennis, who was real good at doing what he said he was going to do. "That guy never showed up late, nicest fella....how long has it been?" I figured about five years since we had seen him.

We hit I-5 south and before the rain let up we arrived in the Nisqually delta area that stretches out just before Lacey proper.

We rounded a corner to see a long drive, and then a couple of ginormous stone pillars supporting log beamwork and the huge letters of the store name, CABELA'S. The look of the building was something akin to a hunting lodge, only in double scale, and once we got inside it was a bit like REI downtown, but with a Bush Pilot buzzing your head and a 12-foot-tall Polar Bear as your store greeter.

Just at this point, a strange thing happened. As we were standing there taking in the enormity of the space, a man walked up to us. It was none other than the man we had both been talking about on the way there, Dennis, and the serendipity of the moment made us both drop our jaws. Also, here was Dennis arriving at exactly the same time that we did (and we didn't even tell him we were coming). Spooky.

After we shook hands too many times and Dennis caught us up with the fact that he was retired and had moved just a couple miles down the road, we parted company and started the regular tour. In the center of the big, open room was a huge fake mountain, peppered with enough examples of exotic and domestic animals in various stages of frozen animation to populate a, well to populate a giant sportsman's mega-store.

I marveled at a Bobcat posed as if nabbing a ptarmigan, a Billy goat (not sure if his name was really 'Billy') and I convinced GT to pose in front of a Walrus (why he agreed I'm not sure). After this, GT went to hunt for a pair of mukluks while I began to track some wily suspenders. I searched the Carhartt mountains, trekked through the Columbia plains and took a rest in the Filson forest and finally, I spotted my prey, a Cabela's employee. "Where's the suspenders?" The nice gal wrinkled her eyebrows and spun around a couple of times, she seemed overwhelmed with the huge space too, but then she pointed due north. "Look around the bend, past the lake, up the trail a bit." I went, but no suspenders. Another Cabela's tag-wearer pointed me towards a distant corner of the upper floor. "You'll need to go the Camo section," he said and I roped up and began my climb. I got lost in the Camo section for two days, and still no suspenders. Luckily, I found GT, who was also lost. "Man, I'm hungry, let's hunt down some grub."

We followed the smell of cooked beast and found a man who looked suspiciously like Marlin Perkins wearing an apron behind a counter. He shoved a hunk of pinkish flesh at me. "Try this wild boar!" he said, and though I have been called worse, the meat was very good. I was ready to have Marlin rustle me up a boarwich, when GT shot me down, "The checkout line...it's really long."

Sure enough, by the time we might have gotten our grub paid for, all the tables, ledges, escarpments and half-rotted log benches would be filled up with other groating patrons. Together we backed out slowly and made our way to the truck. "So what about your suspenders?" GT asked. I shrugged, "I guess if a fella wanted a thousand-dollar compound bow, or a 30-pound bag of elk jerky, this is the place, but for a store that calls itself an 'outfitter,' my own outfit is still incomplete." GT scratched his head, "You should've asked Dennis... the guy is psychic."

Since Dennis had slipped past us, we agreed that another adventure in Cabela Land was the only solution.

Neighbors join forces to beautify Dragonfly Park in West Seattle

By Lindsay Peyton

Instead of standing by while their beloved park falls into disrepair, a group of neighbors has banded together to help reinvigorate and beautify the green space.

Members of the newly formed Friends of Dragonfly Park and Gardeners Group are ready to roll up their sleeves and go to work.

Laura Bruco is leading the way. Her apartment is right across the street from the park, and the view from her windows of the large dragonfly sculpture and grouping of garden beds is what made her decide to rent there.

But that's changed recently.

"We all noticed the decline of the state of the gardens around the dragonfly over the past couple of years," she said. "They've been overrun with weeds as tall as we are. In the past, it wasn't this way. It was pretty well cared for."

When her neighbor Amy Morgan moved to the area a number of years ago, the park setting was a different story.

"It was really beautiful," she said. "There were all these different kinds of flowers, and it was designed to flower year round. There were vines growing up on the dragonfly. Then one day, they came in with trucks and tore it all down. It was just shocking."

Liz Warman, who purchased a townhome in the neighborhood nine years ago, was also upset about the state of the park.

"When I first moved here, they were in their first planting," she said. "When the recession hit, they stopped taking care of it. They ripped up everything and started over. Then, it kind of fell off the radar again."

Neighbors used to weed when they could, but eventually gave up, Warman said.

One landscaper with Seattle Parks and Recreation stops by to mow the grass but not manage the gardens, Bruco said.

"He has gone above and beyond in getting the weeds chopped down," she said. "He suggested that I call to get my neighbors involved to see what could be done."

She first called Sandra Demeritt, senior lead worker for West Seattle Parks.

"Sandra filled me in and said the budget for gardeners has been redirected to cleaning up homeless encampments," Bruco said.

As a result, the parks department only had the resources to send gardeners to the park two days a year.

Demeritt recommended that Bruco gather neighbors to create a "Friends of Group"—a volunteer organization officially registered with Seattle Parks and Recreation.

The Friends of Groups support parks by hosting four work parties a year to remove invasive plants, weed and mulch, as well as plant annuals, perennials, bulbs and shrubs.

Bruco hit the streets to recruit volunteers. "Pretty much everyone I see while I'm out walking my dog, I tell them about it," she said. "The reception has been great."

She has assembled a group during the past two weeks, and this month they plan to meet with Phil Renfrow, senior gardener for Seattle Parks and Recreation to sign an agreement with the department to help maintain the green space.

"We want to do that as soon as possible," Bruco said. "We want to get a work party scheduled and keep this momentum going."

Jana Uhrich who also lives across the street and joined the group, says she wants to help bring the park back to its former glory.

"I always thought it was the most beautiful, hidden park," she said. "It feels like my front yard."

Jasmine Gonzalez is another group member. "I spend a lot of time in the park," she said. "I also really like to garden, but I have limited space in my yard. So this is something I would like to do."

Warman is convinced that the group will make a real difference for Dragonfly Park. "We've hit the right combination of people who are excited about the park," she said.

Follow the Friends of Dragonfly Park and Gardeners Group on Facebook to keep up with the progress of the green space or to join the volunteer effort.

The park is located at 4107 28th Ave. S.W., Seattle by Longfellow Creek.

ArtsWest brings show that peers into the Muslim American experience

ArtsWest

The cast of Ayad Akhtar's "The Who & The What" at ArtsWest include Andre Nelson as Eli, Monika Jolly as Zarina, Alaji as Mahwish, Abhijeet Rane as Afzal.

By Lindsay Peyton

Mat Wright believes in the transformative power of a story.

That's why the artistic director at ArtsWest is always on the lookout for talented writers – and storytellers who create strong, dynamic and authentic characters.

Wright had heard about Ayad Akhtar, the Pakistani-American playwright, novelist and screenwriter who won a Pulitzer Prize for his play "Disgraced."

Wright had a copy of Akhtar's "The Who & The What" on his desk for a couple of years before he read it. When he began to pore through its pages, he became more and more intrigued.

"I was really taken by it," Wright said. "The play has fully fleshed out characters—and it's four very distinct voices. They feel like totally three-dimensional people, and, because of that, you fall in love with them."

Monika Jolly stars as Zarina. She also played the role in the world premiere of the play at La Jolla Playhouse in 2014.

The cast features Andre Nelson as Eli, Alaji as Mahwish and Abhijeet Rane as Afzal.

The plot centers on a Pakistani immigrant Afzal and his two daughters Mahwish and Zarina.

"It's a family story," Wright said. "And one of the quickest paths to understanding is to talk about families. We all have one."

Zarina is writing a controversial novel about the prophet Muhammad, which creates tension in the family. A fourth character Eli is a young convert to Islam, a bridge between Zarina's modern life and heritage.

Wright said that play provides a window into the Muslim American experience.

"In our current political climate, there are struggles with Islamophobia," he said.

He believes that theatre can serve as a place to unite people.

"In the theatre, we want to get a diverse set of actors on stage, and we want equitable representation in terms of the stories we tell," Wright said.

"We're telling stories about what it means to be a human being. Theatre is a place to come together. There's a real magic that can happen there."

"The Who & The What" is being co-produced by Pratidhwani, a nonprofit that supports the work of South Asian artists.

Agastya Kohli, artistic director of the nonprofit's drama wing, said he immediately had ideas for casting the play after reading it.

Kohli called Wright to see if they could work together. "His response was, 'I was just going reach out to you,'" Kohli recalled. "I guess I beat him to it."

Kohli helped create a cultural advisory committee for the production. "Let's get the community involved in what's authentic," he said. "Let's just ask the people who have lived this life instead of researching it on Google."

Kohli worked with ACT theatre when it produced Akhtar's "The Invisible Hand."

"That was a crackling hot drama," Kohli said. "It was so crisp it crackled."

He believes that "The Who & The What" has a similar energy but with a comedic twist.

"It has so many twists and turns," he said. "It takes you deeper and deeper. Everyone needs to see this play for the powerful storytelling."

Kohli added that Pratidhwani has worked to help South Asian actors since it was founded in 2003.

"You have to enable and empower the artist," he said. "What's the point of being an actor if you don't get to perform?"

BALLARDNEWS-TRIBUNE

SERVING BALLARD SINCE 1891

Preparations underway for the 14th Annual Sustainable Ballard Festival

By Lindsay Peyton

It's not your typical festival.

Inside there are no vendors hawking their wares.

Instead, booths feature educational opportunities and interactive demonstrations showing how neighbors can work together to build a strong and healthy community.

"Nothing's for sale," festival coordinator Jenny Heins said. "It's all about making connections and getting to know local businesses. We put an emphasis on education, and we encourage all of our contributors to do something interactive at their booths."

This year's theme is "Certified Local"—and there will be a wide range of ideas for how to choose sustainable products and commit to businesses in the neighborhood.

"Doing things locally is a really good way to combat climate change," Heins said. "Transportation is one of the largest offenders. And the positive aspect of going local is sharing resources and skills with your neighbor. We're trying to show off businesses that you can support locally."

This year the festival is partnering with Spin, Seattle's new bike sharing program, to offer a free ride to the event.

"We're going to give people a discount code so they can get five free rides," Heins said. "After they get to the festival, they can get another code for five more free rides."

Instead of having a main stage this year, Sustainable Ballard will have three smaller stages, each with a unique twist.

One will be a lounge complete with futons, while another will be housed inside a tea garden.

"It's a family-friendly alternative to a beer garden," Heins said.

Plus, it doubles as a fundraiser for Sustainable Ballard. Local businesses in Ballard are donating desserts for the cause.

The third stage, located inside a hybrid Metro bus, will also have a Wifi café inside.

Another new addition to the festival this year is the human-sized hamster wheel that can be taken for a spin around the site.

Attendees will also be able to try pressing apple cider, pet farm animals, peek under the hood of an electric car, test ride an electric bike, make a bubble wand, compare solar cookers, enjoy a carnival cut-out photo op and enjoy live music, as well as demonstrations and workshops.

They will also be able to build a birdhouse with the festival's sponsor Built Green, a non-profit residential building program that sets standards of excellence for sustainable building.

Leah Missik, Built Green program manager, said the birdhouses will be made out of old yard signs from the annual NW Green Homes Tour.

"It's a good way to entertain kids—and recycle something," she said. "It's just a fun activity, and kids love it."

Missik said this is the third year that Built Green has sponsored the festival.

"It's a great way for us to meet people and get them to know about the work we do in the region to support sustainable communities," she said. "The festival facilitates neighbors interacting and facilitates discussions about sustainability."

During the festival, Sustainable Ballard will also provide details about its tool library, slated to open in the fall. "What we mean by tools goes way beyond yard and shop tools," Heins said. "We'll have different stuff for crafts, like sewing machines, and boat repair tools as well."

A repair café at the festival will offer guests an opportunity to get more life out of old or damaged items.

"You can bring something you can't figure out how to fix and we'll give it a shot," Heins said.

She added that Sustainable Ballard will debut its new supporting member option during the festival.

Membership to the nonprofit has always been free—but this will offer individuals an avenue to support the organization financially and benefit from a few extra perks. Everyone who joins as a "supporting member," regardless of the level, will gain a free membership to the Ballard Tool Library.

Nothing's for sale at the 14th Annual Sustainable Ballard Festival. Instead, booths feature educational opportunities and interactive demonstrations showing how neighbors can work together to build a strong and healthy community.

Another way to help the organization is to purchase one of its hand-silk-screened t-shirts, which will be available at the festival.

Heins hopes the community will come out to take advantage of the opportunity to learn new ways of being green.

"It's fun—and it's educational," she said.

Admission is free to the 14th Annual Sustainable Ballard Festival, slated for 11 a.m.–4 p.m. on Sat., Sept. 9 at Ballard Commons Park, 5701 22nd Ave. N.W.

Herbold: Alki public safety and health survey seeks answers and insight

District 1 Seattle City Councilmember Lisa Herbold shared information about a survey her office is conducting regarding Public Safety and Health on Alki.

Herbold writes:

"As a beachside neighborhood and regional destination, the Alki neighborhood and nearby areas face unique public safety and health challenges, from Beach Drive to the West Seattle Bridge. Residents, community groups, and visitors from elsewhere have expressed concern about the public health and safety impacts of a growing number of motor vehicle-related issues and behaviors.

The summer may almost be over, but community members have asked me to ask you to help us prioritize for the remainder of the summer and plan for next year which vehicle and driver behaviors listed below are of greatest concern. If you live, work, or play at Alki, please consider completing the Alki Public Safety and Health Survey. The link can be found on WestsideSeattle.com.

Your input will help influence community awareness, guide policy, and assist long-term planning and enforcement priorities. Results will be shared with the Seattle Police Department and Seattle Department of Transportation.

The survey includes links to the relevant city laws.

Issues I've heard about include speeding, cruising, noise, vehicle racing and others, including the following points:

- Speeding: Research indicates slower vehicle speeds increase pedestrian safety. Pedestrian safety is very important in an area simultaneously serving as a place to live, shop, work, and recreate.
- Cruising: cruising generates traffic congestion, air pollution, noise, and can hinder emergency vehicle responses.
- Vehicle noise: exhaust noise from vehicles with modified mufflers, compression brakes that are not effectively muffled (can be a sign of poor brake maintenance), screeching from rapid acceleration (does not include rapid braking to avoid imminent danger), and sound systems.
- Non-visible front and rear license plates and vehicle window tinting hinder the ability of the public and officers to rapidly identify vehicles and individuals when needed.
- Vehicle idling: long-term idling can result in air pollution.

The survey allows you to note any additional issues you'd like to bring up."

REMEMBER TO SPEAK OUT

To the editor:

Re: White Supremacy and History

The words above the United States Holocaust Museum were written during the WWII era and are still worth reading and thinking about—see below.

First they came for the Socialists, and I did not speak out—Because I was not a Socialist.

Then they came for the Trade Unionists, and I did not speak out—Because I was not a Trade Unionist.

Then they came for the Jews, and I did not speak out—Because I was not a Jew.

We need to be mindful of history, lest we forget the lessons of hate, discrimination, and violence. As the tragedy of Charlottesville recedes and life goes on, we need to remember to speak out such that new peoples are not added to this list: African Americans, immigrants, LGBTQ, Mexicans, Muslims, Native Americans, women, and others. We are one species with lots of variations in size; shape; orientation; weight, skin, eye, and hair color; personalities, interests, skills, and so on. One species; "all men are created equal."

KEEP THE STATUES UP!

To the editor:

Political Correctness has been defined as "Fear of the Left". In other words fear of offending your leftist friends, employers etc. and holding the "wrong" views on social issues. Racism is defined as thinking one race is superior to another, and now has become a well entrenched "industry" in progressive circles.

Now, if you voted for President Trump, which I did and proudly, you are a racist. ditto if you are in favor of a wall on the southern border, don't support BLM (read its manifesto & for its conexus to the Muslim Brotherhood), don't support same sex marriage or the newest offshoot, transgender bathrooms and all that entails, do support "extreme vetting" of immigrants from the Islamic world including a temporary ban, do support photo ID for anyone voting for anything or anyone. Of course other name calling ensues, usually with a "phobia" adjective attached if you are guilty of any of the above or other "improper thinking". I would agree with the above definition of racism as it is pretty simple but now has been expanded to see a "racist" under every rock and around any corner and has become a generic word like "coke" when you order same in a restaurant..and of course the "social justice warriors" in our midst are the final judges of who or what is racist.

Heard recently that graduates of social programs at colleges are dumber when they come out than when they went in, in terms of critical thinking skills..which brings up the point that maybe college is not the only way to an education unless you want to be something like an engineer etc..We need more auto mechanics than we do "social justice warriors"...just look at Middlebury College, UC Berkeley, Evergreen College and the others where you will be shouted down and out if you have a position other than the leftist one and also administrators who cave in to these violent urchins.

Oh yes, I am also in favor of keeping ALL Confederate statues up, nationwide, unlike Sen Nancy Pelosi after being in Congress for 30+ years, now wants all such statues removed from Statuary Hall in DC..apparently she just now "noticed" them and got the new "religion" of intolerance of her own political party so as to play to her base in liberal Northern California et al nationwide...and a woman's right to choose?...Oh yeah...320,000 unborn children murdered by the abortion "industry" last year...Iceland killing unborns with confirmed Down's Syndrome and then saying they have ended the condition and then some of you still vote for these people..and undoubtedly proudly...

WEST SEATTLE

ASSAULT ON DELRIDGE WAY S.W.

Around 3 p.m. on Mon., Aug. 21, officers were dispatched to the 9400 block of Delridge Way S.W., after receiving a report of an assault. When they arrived on the scene, the Seattle Fire Department was already there, evaluating the victim, who was bleeding heavily through his nose and mouth. The man had been assaulted at a bus stop only 10 minutes earlier. The victim said the suspect walked up and punched him twice with a closed fist, without any reason, before leaving the area on a bicycle. The victim said he was too disoriented and in too much pain to describe what the suspect was wearing. He did, however, know the suspect's name from living on the street. Officers knew the suspect as well, because he has a criminal history and a weapons caution. They searched the area for the suspect but were unable to find him.

BURGLARY ON S.W. MORGAN STREET

A man residing on the 1500 block of S.W. Morgan Street was burglarized on Fri., Aug. 18. When he came home from work around 5 p.m., he discovered that his door had been kicked in and all the rooms had been rifled through. Some items were missing. He called 911. When officers arrived, the man had already boarded up and secured the damaged door. He reported missing his Playstation, two cell phones, a computer drawing pad and a weed trimmer. He also thought that a few of his packed boxes were missing. Officers were not able to find any fingerprints. A witness say a white 1990s, Chevy pick-up truck drove towards the home around 3:30 p.m. The truck sat running near the home for 15 to 20 minutes, before speeding away.

BURGLARY ON 34TH AVENUE S.W.

An officer was on patrol on Wed., Aug. 16 and was flagged down by a victim of a burglary that occurred on the 6500 block of 34th Avenue S.W. The man showed the officer to his backyard, where he keeps his gate unlocked. The victim left for work at 7 a.m. When he returned home at 7 p.m., he noticed his gate was pushed open and went into the backyard to investigate. He then walked into the garage and found several boxes were missing. In addition, someone had defecated on the floor in the corner of the room. The victim said that someone had broken into his garage two weeks ago but the suspect did not take any valuable items.

WE NEED YOUR HELP!

We live in rapidly changing times, when newspapers seem like a thing of the past and journalists are too often cast as the enemy instead of respected as a voice of clarity, truth and thoughtfulness.

We at Westside Seattle stand steadfast in our belief in the value of old-fashioned, non-biased, well-researched written words.

We're making a case for community news. We believe that we need to highlight the heroes living in our own neighborhoods, celebrate the arts groups performing in our backyards, place local politics under a microscope and bring small businesses into the spotlight.

We plan on continuing to do so—but we need your help.

All small newspapers are struggling in this digital age, and we're no exception. When you look at the cost of $38–$56 per year, we hope you will think of your subscription as a contribution to keep our papers printing, our writers writing and our photographers clicking away.

Think of your support as an act of solidarity—for your neighborhood, for the ideals of journalism and for the freedom of the press.

Eclipse watching in West Seattle was a party

Some people attached a paper plate to their approved eclipse viewing glasses to ensure totally safe viewing. It may have looked funny but apparently it worked very well.

Patrick Robinson

While West Seattle was not in the “path of totality,” that didn’t keep people from coming outside all over the community to take a look at what for many would be the first and best eclipse of the sun they could see on Aug. 21. The greater Seattle area was only set to see 93% eclipse (the path centered more on Prineville and Madras Oregon here on the west coast). But along Harbor Ave SW the atmosphere was clearly party like as hundreds of people brought out their lawn chairs, and home made eclipse viewing gear to share in the historic event, the first one seen from coast-to-coast in nearly a century.

Other eclipse parties, including one at the High Point Library and at Junction Plaza Park also celebrated the event.

An early morning fog bank had at first threatened to obscure the celestial light show but then it just clung close to the water giving spectators a clear view.

All along the water’s edge people had devices, some dreamt up, some inspired by sources on the web to protect their eyes and/or project the sun on to a surface.

People brought colanders, graters, and other devices to shine the sun through. Some (those with smaller holes) worked better than others.

Alki Adventure Camps brought all their kids down (normally they would have been paddle boarding) to share in the event. They created some pinhole glasses they saw on National Geographic and then headed over to Jack Block Park to view the event.

Many were impressed by the appearance of “eclipse leaves” which were shafts of light passing through and between leaves in trees creating half moon shapes on the ground.

Joe Gullick, visiting from Albuquerque, New Mexico had created a tiny pocket viewer from an old cinnamon spice tin. When reviewing the result though, confessed the image was not very big inside. Another family had just purchased a new refrigerator and made a large scale viewer with a pin hole in aluminum foil over a cutout which projected the eclipse inside the darkened space. Joe said his family brought, “Moon pies, Sun Chips and Crescent rolls” to snack on during the eclipse which in Seattle lasted a total of 2 hours and 20 minutes from 9:09–11:39 a.m.

Kids taking part in the Alki Adventure Camps regular meeting took advantage of the Eclipse to not only observe it but learn about it. They were given home made eclipse viewing eyewear and briefed on how to see the historic event.

Joe Gullick from Albuquerque, New Mexico was in West Seattle on Harbor Ave SW near Salty’s to view the solar eclipse on Aug. 21. He viewed the eclipse by using a converted cinnamon spice tin.

NO. 17-2-06861-6SEA
Summons by Publication

Bank of America, n.a.,
a nation bank
Plaintiff,

vs.

Temple-Inland Mortgage Corporation, a dissolved Nevada corporation Defendant.

The State of Washington to the said Defendant:

You are hereby summoned to appear within sixty days after the date of the first publication of this summons, to wit, within sixty days after the 28th day of July, 2017, and defend the above entitled action in the above entitled court, and answer the complaint of the plaintiff BANK OF AMERICA, N.A., and serve a copy of your answer upon the undersigned attorneys for plaintiff BANK OF AMERICA, N.A., at the office below stated; and in case of your failure so to do, judgment will be rendered against you according to the demand of the complaint, which has been filed with the clerk of said court.

BANK OF AMERICA, N.A. is the current holder and owner of an obligation secured by a deed of trust naming Michael D. Neudorfer and Deanne T. Neudorfer, husband and wife, as grantor and thereafter assigned to Temple-Inland Mortgage Corporation as beneficiary that encumbers certain real property located in King County, Washington, commonly known as 2606 SW 112th Street, Seattle, WA 98146 (the "Real Property"). The tax parcel number for the Real Property is 928680-0006. The obligation secured by the deed of trust has been paid in full. BANK OF AMERICA, N.A. however, is unable to reconvey the deed of trust due to a break in the recorded beneficial ownership of the deed of trust. The Complaint seeks no monetary judgment but requests the Court to enter judgment declaring that BANK OF AMERICA, N.A. is the beneficiary of the deed of trust and the deed of trust no longer encumbers the Real Property and other relief as deemed proper by the Court.

JEAN GODDEN

By Jean Godden (Her Alias)

What's in a name? Like many who are born female, I have been called a variety of names. When I arrived on the scene, I was named after a maternal grandmother who had a longer, grander name. She was Jennie Wilhelmina, named after a one-time Swedish queen; I emerged as just plain Jean.

Coming into adult life, I was addressed as Miss Jean, the proper address for an unmarried woman. After reaching voting age, I married and, as was then the custom, I took my new husband's name and became Mrs. Robert W. Godden Jr. I rebelled enough to sign my checks with my given name and two last names. But, at the time, newspaper style books decreed that married women should be properly identified by their husband's name.

Newspaper style was also the rule in public life. For years, the so-called "woman's seat" on the Seattle City Council—a lone woman among the nine councilmembers—was occupied by a "Mrs. Harlan Edwards." Today we know her by her given name: Myrtle.

When Myrtle Edwards died in an unfortunate accident, her co-workers sought a proper memorial. They decided to name a park after her. They first suggested Gasworks Park, but her heirs didn't like that park's design with its rusting towers. Instead they opted for the park along the Elliott Bay waterfront that still bears her name.

In Myrtle's day, news organizations were fussy about how they referred to women. It mattered if you were single (Miss Jane Smith) married (Mrs. Robert Jones) divorced (Mrs. Jane Smith Jones) or had resumed your maiden name.

When I worked as a reporter (first at the University Herald and then the Seattle P-I), I often had to check with newsworthy subjects to make certain we were using the proper honorific (Miss or Mrs.?) There was far less hassle if you were a guy. If you were under 16, you were addressed as Master Jones; if you were married, divorced or single, you were merely Mr. Jones.

Things became more complicated in the '70s when Ms., a new designation, came along. At first the new honorific was treated like feminist overreach. Staid publications like the New York Times refused to use Ms., considering it a passing fad. Once Gloria Steinem unveiled Ms. magazine, the term became more mainstream.

It was still years before newspaper style books relented and came up with this gender-neutral rule: "Refer to both men and women by first and last name without courtesy titles on first reference; in subsequent references only by last name without title. Use the courtesy titles Mr., Miss, Ms. or Mrs. only in direct quotations or after the first reference when a woman specifically requests it." Is that crystal clear?

Just as byzantine are the use of such terms as "the Honorable," used as a courtesy title for judges, mayors and other elected officials. The proper address in the courthouse is "Your Honor." The Honorable title also is used for counselor posts; but our country's ambassadors are properly addressed as "your Excellency."

Even after an official leaves office, "the Honorable" is still used and can be abbreviated as "the Hon." But protocol says that Honorable is only used for living persons and never along with other titles such as "the Honorable Dr. Whosit."

When I was elected to the Seattle City Council, I learned that I had become a CM, short for "councilmember." But I was nonplused to discover that I had also become "the Honorable Godden." What was even more bizarre was when I started receiving bulk mailings, the kind that request money and pretend to be on a first name basis. Thanks to mail merge, those form letters start out as "Dear Honorable." How intimate.

The entire subject of courtesy titles seems like a quaint holdover from days of yore, when we addressed members of the peerage using titles like "your lordship" or "your ladyship." For my part, I really could do without being addressed as "Honorable" or as "Dear Honorable." If you should meet me on a Seattle street or in a local coffee bar, I'm happier to be plain Jean.

Jean Godden is a veteran Seattle PI and Seattle Times newspaperwoman and city councilwoman. Her column will give us an insider's view of city politics. You can email Jean at jgodden@blarg.net.
